

FDA & EMEA to Consider Additional Test Results When Assessing New Drug Safety

In the first use of a framework allowing submission of a single application to the two agencies, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and the European Medicines Agency (EMA) worked together to allow drug companies to submit the results of seven new tests that evaluate kidney damage during animal studies of new drugs.