

FDA Soon May Support Biomarker Tests

The Food and Drug Administration is poised to throw its support behind a powerful new method of predicting the safety of experimental drugs, a step that could help pharmaceutical companies bring treatments to market more quickly – and reduce patients' risk.